Future plans

Expanding the existing curriculum by adding emerging fields such as Sports Nutrition, Public Health Nutrition, and Geriatric Nutrition.

1. Setting up a dedicated Center for Nutrition and Health Research to study lifestyle diseases, food security, and dietary interventions.
2. Partnering with medical, agricultural, and social science departments for holistic research on nutrition, health, and community development.
3. Conducting workshops for women and students on food processing, and diet counselling to promote self-employment.
4. Working with ICMR, FSSAI, and UNICEF to implement nutrition and health projects at the grassroots level.
5. Upgrading labs with advanced food analysis equipment and dietary assessment tools.
6. Developing online courses, e-books, and virtual nutrition counselling services for students and the public.
7. Establishing an organic food garden and promoting research on sustainable diets and climate-resilient food systems.
8. Established of short-term skill development courses:
 - Textiles
 - Bakery
 - Training for Day Care Professionals
